Meet Deborah Mensah, Executive Director

Her warm smile captivates, but Deborah Mensah is a fierce advocate for mothers and their children.

And so, it is with great delight that after a lengthy search, the Board of Directors of Save the Mothers announces Deborah's appointment to the role of Executive Director.

Effective immediately, she will work alongside Founding Director, Dr. Jean Chamberlain Froese, to raise awareness of the plight of vulnerable girls and women around the globe.

Deborah has built a career in the development and management of public health projects in Africa, Asia, Oceania and North America. She passionately believes, "No mother should die whilst giving life, and that babies and children are most likely to thrive when they have a healthy mother supporting them."

You will hear more - from and about Deborah - in the weeks and months ahead. If and when you happen to chat with her or meet her, please give her a warm welcome and your support.

Alumni in Action

While interning with Save the Mothers, Ananya Parasor had a chance meeting with STM alumnus Richard Mulindwa. They had a long talk about his time with STM, his current work and his involvements since graduating from STM, (Uganda Class of 2012).

The Kamuli Fistula Camp

In this heart-wrenching but hopeful blog, program intern Stephanie Fraser writes about her experience visiting a

"camp" unlike any other ... The Kamuli Fistula Camp.

WORKING together for maternal and child health

"I am looking forward to working with Deborah [Mensah], and to cheering her on as she grows Save the Mothers and expands its reach and influence. The need is so great. But we work inspired by the countless people who demonstrate they believe in our mission through their financial, advocacy, and prayer support of Save the Mothers."
